What's New In Excel Utility?

Woo2 is an Excel utility that enables you to quickly transform a number of cell references into a single, unique reference. This unique reference can then be used with Google Sheets' in an embedded formula - which cannot use a cell reference, but a unique reference only. Woo2 is one of those small utilities that once you are aware of it, you will use every day. In fact, you can easily argue that Excel itself is nothing, but just an application that enables you to perform various mathematical, financial and statistical calculations. Woo2 comes with three main features. The first one is, of course, the ability to transform cell references into unique ones. The second is the "Reflect" function, which allows you to copy and paste the unique reference of a cell and select "Reflect", while the third and final feature is the "Search" function, which is the unique way to look up data in a Google sheet. The "Reflect" function is of particular interest, especially if you run large data sets. This particular feature enables you to copy and paste a cell reference into several cells throughout the data set, and then be able to find the exact row where the data is located, when you search for this data. The "Search" function is useful as well, if you need to look up a specific value in a column or row in a cell. It helps in these cases, as it provides you with the reference number for that row or cell, making it easy to locate and use the data. Woo2 is small, lightweight and easy to use. It provides the "Reflect" and "Search" functions to Google Sheets. We recommend that you test the features out for yourself before deciding that it is the software you need.
